

Tom Scott, MD

Dr. Scott is an anesthesiologist and pain specialist practicing in Philadelphia. He is triple board certified in Anesthesiology, Pain Medicine, and Internal Medicine and serves as a Clinical Assistant Professor of Anesthesiology and Critical Care Medicine at George Washington University School of Medicine and Health Sciences.

He was director of acute pain management at Christiana hospital in Wilmington Delaware, where he started treating patients with IV ketamine outside of the operating room for the first time. After spending two years in Washington DC as an assistant professor of anesthesiology, he moved back to his native Philadelphia with the hopes of bringing his vision of controlling even the most complex pain crises in a safe and comfortable outpatient setting. He continues to write and speak nationally on pain management.
